Making yearly inspections

You should inspect your roof at least once every year. When on your roof, exercise caution and avoid stepping on the tiles. Even better, delegate this work to a qualified roofing contractor. A skilled specialist knows what to look for and potential warning flags. The inspector will look out for any tiles that are broken or damaged. These small inspections can help you save big time on roof maintenance.

Getting rid of debris

On occasion, unwanted items will find their way onto your roof. You can't do much about it, but you can move swiftly and eliminate whatever ends there. Tree branches and twigs can fall onto your roof during strong winds. Additionally, there can be a substantial accumulation of dirt, moss, leaves, and other debris over time. You might not believe this has much to do with your roof other than it starting to look bad.

Cleaning

You should spray off the tile roofing a few times yearly to eliminate filth and dirt. The tiles' color and strength can both be preserved by doing this. A power washer for this task will be even more efficient than a garden hose. Don't direct the water stream directly towards the tiles, though. The tiles could break or split under this direct pressure. Use an indirect spray to avoid harming your roof instead. Warm water is preferred.
